3. Hotel accommodation

ISMAR was not able to make block bookings for the meeting because the city of Venice is an international tourist destination. October is the high season for art exhibitions and international congresses. Due to the peculiarity of the city of Venice, hotels are divided in areas which are located in places where the access to the meeting venue is relatively easy, but be prepared to walk in Venice.

The only way to walk to the meeting venue is to follow the pathway of the ferry line 5.2. at stop Celestia or Bacini (see Image 1). ## 4. Meeting Registration

It is very important that you register your attendance to the meeting with the GEBCO Permanent Secretary, David Clark at the address above, as soon as possible. Please send your name, institution, email address and the dates you will attend. This information is necessary to plan the agenda and logistics for the meeting. Because of the hotel situation in Venice, it would be very useful for us to know where you will be staying. Therefore, please also send me the name of your hotel you will be staying during your time in Venice.

5. Local information

Venice is an Italian city (Western Europe) which lies offshore on a series of islands in the NE Adriatic Sea and is the capital of the Veneto Region. Venice is situated in a natural lagoon on 118 small islands separated by canals (channels) and linked by bridges. The official language is Italian; English is widely spoken at restaurants and hotels. Around 60,000 people reside in the historic city of Venice.

The historical city is divided into six areas or "sestiere". These are: Cannaregio, San Polo, Dorsoduro (including the Islands of Giudecca and Isola Sacca Fisola), Santa Croce, San Marco and Castello. Other islands of the Venetian Lagoon (like Lido, Certosa, Murano, Burano, St. Erasmo etc) do not form part of any of the sestieri. Each sestiere has its own house numbering system.

Venice is one of the world's greatest pedestrian cities. No automotive vehicles are permitted within the city of Venice, except for some restricted places like near the train station (Venezia Santa Lucia) and on the Lido Island. Everything and everyone in the city is transported by boat. The old city is very compact; the most familiar historical sights are Piazza San Marco and the Grand Canal. In places the streets are so narrow that you can stretch your arms out and touch the buildings on either side of the street.

September to November sees average rainfall rise to more than 60 mm and visitors to Venice can expect at least one rainy day in a week. But temperatures hold up well at 15°C. The Acqua Alta phenomenon (flooding in the streets of Venice) is not expected in this season; in any case it will be forecasted at least 3 days in advance.

6. How to arrive

The Venice airport is an international port of call. Connections are easy from the airport both to historic Venice and the mainland (Venezia Mestre). Historic Venice is well connected by train to the most important Italian cities.

I look forward to seeing you in Venice!

Best regards,
